Dear Honored Students, Family, Friends and Colleagues:

Slippery Rock University exists for the purpose of helping students successfully fulfill their academic and leadership aspirations. The Academic Honors and Student Leadership Convocation is our time to celebrate each student’s achievements and their progress toward realizing their dreams. This event kicks off SRU’s Celebration of Excellence—a variety of events and activities in the coming weeks highlighting student achievement.

SRU welcomes you to this event and the opportunity to recognize our students’ hard work, service-learning contributions, athletic excellence, extracurricular leadership and academic achievements. We will also celebrate the accomplishments of a select group from the SRU family whose excellence in teaching and academic advising has contributed to students’ academic experience.

Thank you for sharing your time with the SRU community. Undoubtedly, the encouragement you have provided to your student being honored today has supported their personal and professional development. Please know it has been our privilege to share this journey with each student and with you.

Thank you for putting your confidence in Slippery Rock University where students really “experience the difference.”

An accomplished scholar and educator, Norton previously served as president of Southern Connecticut State University for six years. She was the first woman president in SCSU’s 115-year history. Following her presidency, she completed a year-long sabbatical researching how university teacher preparation programs could support public school education reform.

A native of Cleveland, Ohio, Norton graduated with honors and earned a bachelor’s degree in physical education and recreation from Denison University in Granville, Ohio; and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa scholastic honorary. She earned three degrees from Teachers College, Columbia University in New York; a master of arts in applied physiology and both a master of education and a doctor of education in applied physiology. For her contributions to the field of sports medicine, including serving as president of state and regional professional organizations, she was elected a fellow of the American College of Sports Medicine.

An accomplished athlete, Norton has been nationally ranked as a marathon runner and has earned a black belt in Tae Kwon Do, won state Tae Kwon Do championships in fighting and forms, played intercollegiate basketball and volleyball, raced a dog sled team for 10 years and refereed soccer games with Henry.
President’s Award for Excellence in Teaching

Douglas Strahler
Assistant Professor of Communication, College of Business

Creative, dynamic and highly knowledgeable.
These are the words one student used to describe Douglas Strahler, assistant professor of communication at Slippery Rock University and the recipient of the 2017 President’s Award for Excellence in Teaching.
The teaching award honors a faculty member whose primary responsibility is teaching. Those nominated must demonstrate an exemplary commitment to teaching and student learning and must maintain a classroom that promotes high student engagement while pursuing scholarly growth that enhances teaching.

“There is no doubt that Douglas Strahler meets – if not exceeds – all of these requirements,” said SRU President Cheryl Norton. “We couldn’t be prouder of all those faculty members who are not only dedicated to their disciplines, but to the University as well as their students. This year, Dr. Strahler stands out from the crowd.”

Strahler’s nomination received staunch support from students and coworkers alike.

“(Strahler) relates his area of study in a way that is both practical and highly technical, yet he has the ability to make it all approachable to his students,” said Amy Walters, SRU assistant professor of communication. “I have been impressed every time I have seen him teach material that is so current that only a few experts have weighed in on it. He can explain with a mixture of patience for those who do not yet understand.

“He has high expectations for his students, giving them challenging assignments, yet they respond to him with great respect, admiration and warmth. He is a special kind of teacher, a star in his field and a tremendously effective teacher. The University should be very proud to have him among its faculty.”

Growing up with a fascination of art and how it translated to the computer screen, Strahler became intrigued in how to communicate messages through digital media.

Over the years, his desire to continually learn how to leverage these technologies to communicate allowed him to make a career of his passion through co-owning a graphic and web design firm, as well as teaching courses in graphic design, web design and social media.

Since joining SRU’s communication department in 2010, Strahler has taught courses in social media, interactive multimedia, digital imaging, media project management, issues in communication technology, advanced web management and public speaking. Additionally, he has led digital portfolio workshops for senior seminar courses.

“My passion for teaching began right here at SRU,” said Strahler. “I’m not referring to my first day on the job, either, but rather my time as an undergraduate, working as a graphics lab assistant. “Being able to assist and share my knowledge with fellow classmates was very rewarding, especially knowing that I was a positive influence on numerous students’ educational experiences. It was through these interactions that I realized I wanted to make this type of impact every day and felt that joining a higher education learning community would help me reach that goal.”

Strahler describes his teaching philosophy as a “vision of preparing my students for the classroom, through graduation and beyond.” He bases his approach around the fostering of learning; content, pedagogy and technology; innovation; personal and professional development; and lifelong learning.

“Each student who enters the classroom has a unique learning style and as an educator, it is my responsibility to accommodate each student’s learning style to the best of my ability by creating an atmosphere conducive to their individual skill sets,” said Strahler.

Placing an emphasis on relationship building in order to establish a bond that goes beyond a textbook is an approach not lost on his students – past or present.

“During my days as an undergraduate at SRU, I was lucky enough to not only be a student of Dr. Strahler’s, but also looked to him as a mentor for communication and leadership activities,” said Maria Heintzinger, ’15.

“I met a lot of wonderful professors throughout my time at the University, but Dr. Strahler will certainly be the one who left the biggest mark on my undergraduate career. His dedication is – and I believe always will be – to his students, current or former. There is a lot to be said for a professor who cares so strongly about his students’ success.”

Strahler said that one of the major goals of his courses is that students walk away feeling better prepared for their future career.

“During my time as a student at SRU, I was fortunate to have a great support network of professors who cared about my success inside and outside the classroom. As an educator, I hope to instill this same passion to my classroom practices and to continue to pursue the mission of this University by transforming the ‘intellectual, social, physical and leadership capacities of students in order to prepare them for life and career success.’”

Strahler earned his Bachelor of Science degree in communication at SRU; his Master of Science in new media from Syracuse University; and his doctoral degree in instructional technology and leadership from Duquesne University.

He is a member of the New York State Communication Association, currently serving as the organization’s vice president; and the Eastern Communication Association. He is also a past member of the International Society for Technology in Education.

Other finalists for this year’s award were: Thaddeus Boron, assistant professor of chemistry, representing the College of Health, Environment and Science; Alice Del Vecchio, assistant professor of interdisciplinary programs, representing the College of Liberal Arts; and Deborah Wells, professor of elementary education/early childhood education, representing the College of Education.

Slippery Rock University is pleased and proud to present Douglas Strahler with this year’s President’s Award for Excellence in Teaching.
David Jordan, associate professor in Slippery Rock University’s School of Business, is being honored for his dedication and outstanding service to students with this year’s President’s Award for Outstanding Academic Advising.

Jordan, who joined SRU in 2013, has a self-described passion for working with all stakeholders to prepare students as leaders in industry and government. His research interests include health care benefit design, health care management and administrative processes, individual and population health behaviors and factors of health care utilization.

In announcing the award, SRU President Cheryl Norton told Jordan, “You have gone above and beyond to dedicate the time to make sure every student receives the assistance they need to be successful at Slippery Rock University and in the future.

“The decision to award you this year’s honor comes as a result of the enthusiastically strong recommendations from several of the students you have advised. It is obvious from that show of support, the difference you have made in their academic and personal lives.”

“I was honored by my nomination for this award,” said Jordan. “I passionately strive to be a highly effective adviser because of the impact I can affect for the students who are the central focus for my professional and personal achievement.

“More importantly, for my advisees to recognize me in this capacity means more to me than can be expressed. This suggests that my genuine interest and passion to broaden their horizons, foster their personal and professional development and enhance their academic experience is both recognized and appreciated.”

Jordan’s approach to advising is honest, straightforward and based on three constructs: relationships, expertise and engagement.

“Advisement is not limited to a meeting or session, but is an ongoing relationship and often lasts beyond graduation for many as alumni,” Jordan said. “Relationships are built on genuine interest in each student as an individual, trust and respect. This includes understanding each person’s interests, personality, passions and goals.”

The approach Jordan takes is vividly evident to his students.

“I met Dr. Jordan for the first time spring semester of 2016 when I chose him as my Organizational Behavior professor. Since Day One, he not only distinguished himself as a magnificent instructor, but also as a tremendous mentor,” said Carla Corrochano-Moracho, a junior marketing major from Talavera De La Reina, Spain.

“After I had him for this class, I ended my semester with a whole new perspective about how important the little things in life are and how incredible it can be when your professor reminds you what your real concerns in life should be.

“He encourages his students to be part of different institutions or organizations that could help them earn more experience and differentiate themselves from others; provides suggestions regarding scholarships or other sources of aids that one could be eligible for; and most importantly, speaks with students when he or she is having real problems, even if the issue is not directly related to academics.

“Being an adviser means more than just providing an opinion on the program they are advising for. Dr. Jordan does that and so much more.”

It’s that “more” – the going beyond the academic with students – for which Jordan feels a personal, if not familial, responsibility.

“To seek my advice if they should pursue a particular career path, or continue their education, or even relationship advice, reminds me of the impact I have for so many persons,” he said.

“On several occasions I have had students confide in me about significant emotional, substance abuse or social issues for which I have been able to seek additional assistance through the University’s counseling services for them. In each case I have personally followed up with students to assure him or her that I am there to support them to the extent possible.

“I recognize the difficulty many students have with financial, social and other difficulties and make certain they know I care and that I am there for them. As a father of three, the gravity of such responsibility is not taken lightly.”

Jordan earned his Bachelor of Science in management and his Master’s of Business Administration from the University of Pittsburgh; and his doctoral degree from Virginia Commonwealth University.

Prior to joining SRU, he served more than 20 years in the insurance and managed care industries, including time as a regional vice president in addition to instructional stints at the University of Pittsburgh; Pennsylvania State University, Fayette; Pennsylvania State University, New Kensington; and Robert Morris University.

He is a board member at large for Northeastern Association of Business, Economics, and Technology and a member of the Association for Marketing & Healthcare Research.

Other finalists for this year’s award were: Jonathan Helmick, assistant professor of music and Jennifer Willford, associate professor of psychology.

It is clear to see that students truly “Experience the Difference” in academic advising, offered by this year’s honoree, David Jordan.
Syed R. Ali-Zaidi Award for Academic Excellence Nominee

Timothy Samec

Physics major from Drums

Timothy Samec, a physics major from Drums, is Slippery Rock University’s nominee for the 2017 Syed R. Ali-Zaidi Award presented by Pennsylvania’s State System of Higher Education board of governors.

Samec’s nomination followed rigorous internal procedures that included nominations from across the University’s academic community.

Samec will graduate in May with a major in physics with a concentration in computational biophysics and a minor in mathematics. He plans to pursue a doctoral degree in biomedical engineering.

Despite majoring in one of the most demanding areas of study offered by SRU, Samec’s academics have encompassed not only the required coursework, but have taken advantage of extensive research opportunities.

His research on the physical properties of integrated DNA nanostructure architectures – conducted with SRU faculty in collaboration with faculty at the University of Pittsburgh – was supported in part by a grant from the National Science Foundation. Samec presented his findings at the 2015 National Conference for Undergraduate Research in Spokane, Washington. Later this year, he will present his work at the 2017 American Physical Society’s annual meeting in New Orleans. His work has also been recognized through a President’s Undergraduate Research Grant, the Provost’s Distinguished Scholar Award and selection as an SRU nominee for the prestigious Barry M. Goldwater Scholarship.

Samec’s belief in teamwork and his willingness to reach out to help others has also been demonstrated outside the classroom through a variety of on-campus leadership positions and community service activities.

He founded the Triathlon Club at SRU, serving as its first president; presided over the Physics and Pre-Engineering Club; and, in order to “help make Slippery Rock University a better place for other students,” served as a FYRST seminar student leader; and a peer physics tutor.

Samec has also served as a mentor for teens with autism through the University’s TRAILS program; assisted with the Allegheny Valley Schools aquatics therapy program for young adults with profound physical disabilities; and served as a co-director of bocce ball for the Western Pennsylvania Special Olympics.

In 2015 and 2016, Samec was selected to represent the U.S. as a member of Team USA at the International Triathlon Union World Championships. He finished 39th in the world in his age group at the 2015 event.

Samec will graduate in May with a major in physics with a concentration in computational biophysics and a minor in mathematics. He plans to pursue a doctoral degree in biomedical engineering at Clemson University where he has been awarded a full scholarship and $20,000 per year research assistantship. At Clemson, he will study to develop a drug targeting and delivery system to attack cancer cells.

Ali-Zaidi nominees must demonstrate outstanding academic performance; be recognized by members of the University faculty; participate in extra/co-curricular activities; and submit an essay addressing how their university has prepared them for the next step in their career. The award, given annually to a graduate of one of the 14 State System universities, was created by Syed Ali-Zaidi, a charter member of the State System board of governors in honor of his grandfather Mir Wilayat Hussain.

Student Speaker

Emily Brumbaugh

Music education major from Altoona

Emily Brumbaugh, a music education major from Altoona, has been selected as today’s Academic Honors and Student Leadership Convocation speaker.

Brumbaugh, who will graduate in May, has a 4.0 grade point average. Twice she was named one of Slippery Rock University’s Top 20 Presidential Scholars (2015 junior class, 2016 senior class). Brumbaugh was named a Rising Star Award recipient as an individual (2015) and as part of an organization (2016).

She is a recipient of the Robert M. Smith Music Scholarship (2013-2016); the Kate Brennan Music Education Scholarship (2016); the Jamie Minoski Special Education Scholarship (2016); the Lily Ray Byers Early Childhood Education Scholarship (2016); and the Catherine Schaefer Special Education Scholarship (2015).

Brumbaugh was also awarded the 2015 Swope Music Department Citizenship Award which honors an undergraduate student who has demonstrated leadership qualities within the Department of Music.

A student teacher at Butler’s Center Township Elementary and Neshannock Junior/Senior High School, Brumbaugh has served as an SRU honors program mentor to new inductees; an incoming student audition day representative; a Music Department student council member; and treasurer for the saxophone studio and symphonic wind ensemble.

She gained additional teaching experience at multiple local school districts with the planning, supervising and organizing of marching band and music education programs. Brumbaugh has also collaborated with the Central Presbyterian Church of Tarentum to organize and develop a summer music camp for underprivileged children.

Other nominees for the speaker honor were Heather Toth, a safety management major from Douglassville; Emily Rathmann, an exercise science major from Lake Ronkonkoma, New York; and Katelyn Widomski, an early childhood/special education major from North East.

Norton Undergraduate Research Scholarship

The Norton Undergraduate Research Scholarship is a scholarship program designed to assist undergraduate students in their pursuit of academic research or creative activity. The program requires that each application be prepared by a qualified undergraduate student, and that the proposal describes a research project or creative activity that will engage the student in research skills and techniques of that discipline. A faculty member is required to mentor the undergraduate student and provide oversight of the research project or creative activity. Research conducted by Norton Scholars with faculty mentors should contribute in meaningful ways to the knowledge base of a given discipline and support the strategic initiatives of the University. The Scholarship program is open to sophomore or junior status undergraduate students who have demonstrated a 3.0 GPA both cumulatively and in the major in which the research will be conducted. Up to two students will be selected to receive a scholarship in the amount of $500 each. Recipients of the Norton Undergraduate Research Scholarship may request to have the award applied toward annual educational costs or to cover research-related expenses.

Because of continuous updating, the preceding list is not all-inclusive. For further information concerning the establishment of scholarships, please contact the Office of University Advancement, 100 Old Main, 724.738.2004, Slippery Rock University.

ALMA MATER

I
Where the Slippery Rock Creek wanders
With her sparkling falls,
There in stately grace and beauty,
Stand old S.R. halls.

CHORUS
Sing her praises, loud resounding,
Speed them on their way,
We’ll be true to thee, O, S.R.
True for aye and aye.

II
All thy halls the day in dying
Crowns with golden light,
And the morn with waking splendor
Greets thee in thy might.
(Chorus)

III
Long may you, our Alma Mater,
Shed your light abroad,
As your loyal sons and daughters
Live for you and God.
(Chorus)
