PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

Slippery Rock University’s Master of Arts in English degree provides a 15-month course rotation in contemporary literate practices. The degree encompasses study of reading and writing generated through traditional and new media. The curriculum features extensive research and practical applications. Students specialize in the study of writing produced in any discipline or profession. Nine required courses, including a six-credit capstone experience during the final semester of the program, are completed within the applicant’s area of interest.

The Master of Arts in English prepares students for writing in fields such as business, education, government, law, nonprofit administration, translation, and technical writing.
