About the Program

History is made every day, by all of us. We shape our society, our culture, our economy. And, in turn, this historical moment makes us who we are. The faculty in the department of history at SRU teaches courses that examine all regions of the world and countless chapters of the human story. We want our students to understand that everybody’s history is interdependent. We offer students the opportunity to be guided by their own interests, while also introducing them to new subjects and new ideas. We offer a Bachelor of Arts in History, with a variety of concentrations for the major and for students interested in a history minor. We also provide the subject courses for the Bachelor of Science in secondary education, social studies.

When you study history, you develop critical thinking and analysis skills. You learn to seek and recognize connections between events that seem unrelated and to appreciate the unintended consequences of historical actions and decisions. Armed with historical knowledge, you will be an informed citizen and an engaged member of your local and global community. With the intellectual habits of active reading, focused research and lucid writing, you will possess a flexible skillset that ensures a lifetime of opportunities as a creative and capable professional.

Student Opportunities

The SRU history department offers a wide variety of opportunities to students who want to engage with history outside of the traditional classroom. Each year, faculty lead travel abroad trips, either as formal courses or as extra-curricular travel. Students can study abroad for as little as two weeks, or for an entire semester.

Students with a high enough GPA can be initiated into the student honorary society, Phi Alpha Theta. The honorary PAT organizes a number of events during the year. Members travel to historical sites and take trips to Washington, D.C., New York and Philadelphia. They also sponsor guest speakers and help plan the annual History Student and Alumni Picnic.

Our intern specialist helps students acquire hands-on experience through a variety of intern partnerships in the region. Students can also benefit from service-learning opportunities and career guidance from our faculty and from partners in government, non-profits and the law.

Students can gain valuable work experience through the Stone House Center for Public Humanities, which includes an early 19th Century historic site and museum.

Career Opportunities

With the skills you obtain as a history major at SRU, you can have a successful career in countless professions. Unlike other degrees that train you to be one thing, a history degree tells employers you possess skills that are transferable from one professional environment to another: precise and effective reading, critical thinking, creative analysis and clear and persuasive writing. Today, the average number of careers in a lifetime is seven; so a history degree is highly valuable. History majors enter the workforce immediately or go on to graduate degrees. With a history degree, you can be many things:

- Archivist
- Historian
- Congressional Aide
- Technical Writer
- FBI / CIA Agent
- Historical Society Staff Member
- Foreign Service Officer

History students say . . .

“The best faculty of any department on campus, you are treated as a historian and not a student, and you learn skills that can catapult you into nearly any field you wish and you’ll be successful.” - Andy Cumming, BA History

“The SRU History Department Faculty are inspiring individuals. It is a rarity - but a reality - that professors can make your heart race in anticipation of the next class.” - Devan Lindy, History major

“I still to this day credit the History Department at SRU for their role in my success.” - Dr. Andrea Kitta, PhD, Folklore Studies, professor at Eastern Carolina State University

“As a History major I’ve not only had the opportunity to take interesting courses. I also had the chance to build my leadership skills and get practical experience that will help me pursue a career.” - Shelby Heisler, History major
